Rabbi Rami Shapiro, Ph. D. is adjunct Professor of Religion and Director of The Writers Loft at Middle Tennessee State University, and the Director of Wisdom House, an interfaith center in Nashville. Author of over twenty books, Rami also writes a regular column for Spirituality and Health magazine called Roadside Assistance for the Spiritual Traveler.

The key to recovery, as Bill W. put it is, "Stop playing God!" We play God when we insist we can control our lives--not just our addictions, but the entirety of our lives. Rabbi Rami will lead us in an exploration of this primal obsession for control, and explore the power that arises with true surrender. This lecture will focus on the 12 steps of AA from the perspective of spiritual growth rather than addiction.
